If You Can't Answer These General Knowledge Questions, The Viewers At Home Will!

50 Things You Have to Know is an interactive general knowledge quiz that tests the nation's understanding of the things we all "should" know in the modern world.

World-renowned authorities have set the bar across 10 key categories, putting together lists of 50 facts in fields such as modern history, science and economics.

Competing couples not only play against each other, but also against the home audience, as their knowledge of everything from the Big Bang Theory to the European Union is tested in this nail-biting game show with genuine take-out.

The game begins once the studio computer selects the 50 questions of the day across the range of 10 topics. With three possible answers to each, the couple with the most correct answers stays in the game. Viewers play along in real time via the show's app to see if they can do better, building their knowledge as they advance.

Progressing on, the most successful couple then plays live against the best performing families at home. In a dramatic twist, the nation's average score is revealed and, only if they have beaten it, do the final couple win the show's Grand Prize.

Who knows enough to win? Will it be the on-screen contenders or one amazing family playing along at home?
