Will Loving One Person Ever Be Enough?

Marc-Alexandre, a handsome 50-something salesman, splits his life between Montreal and Magog because of work obligations - or so it seems. Soon it becomes apparent he spends his days maintaining three different lives running in parallel: a loving, supporting, and dedicated husband and father of two families, who know nothing about one other, and a lover to a third woman who recently entered his secretive circle of love. A car crash he's involved disrupts his carefully choreographed lives, when all three households chaotically intersect - and his own life is left in the balance.

Too Much Love is a thrilling dramatization of the lengths one man goes to sustain illusions, lies, and deceptions. Marc-Alexandre believes he can love everyone, but his lies and manipulations inevitably come to light, in a series that sheds light on two modern social taboos: marital infidelity and polyamory. This story of never-ending twists and turns confronts viewers with an anti-hero whose lifestyle shocks, captivates, and leaves them questioning their own personal beliefs.
